APPOINTED ACTING PRESIDENT FOR C.N.E.

With the resignation of Sir Henry Thornton as chairman and president of the Canadian National Railways, effective August the 1st, Mr. Hungerford, operating vice-president, has been appointed by the board of directors as acting president of the company.

S. J. HUNGERFORD

Samuel J. Hungerford is one of Canada's best known railroad operating officers. His experience has ranged, in more than 45 years, from the humble position of machinist's apprentice, where he commenced in 1886, to that of vice-president in charge of operation, maintenance and construction of Canada's largest railroad system, the Canadian National Railways.

Born in Bedford, Quebec, sixty years ago, S. J. Hungerford entered railroading as an apprentice with the Southeastern Railroad, later part of the C.P.R., at Farnham, Quebec. Completing his apprenticeship, he worked as machinist at many points in Quebec, Ontario and Vermont, and in 1894 was appointed chargehand at Windsor Street station, Montreal. From 1897, Mr. Hungerford worked as assistant foreman, locomotive foreman and general foreman at Farnham, Megantic and McAdam Junction, and in 1901 was transferred to Cranbrook, B.C., as locomotive foreman with the Canadian Pacific. From Cranbrook, he moved in 1903 to Calgary as master mechanic of the Canadian Pacific's western division and in the following year was made superintendent of the locomotive shops at Winnipeg, becoming in 1908 superintendent of shops.

In 1910, Mr. Hungerford joined the Canadian Northern Railway as superintendent of rolling stock, with headquarters at Winnipeg, and in 1915 he moved to Toronto in the same position. In 1917, Mr. Hungerford became general manager of the Eastern lines, Canadian Northern Railway, and in the following year was named assistant vice-president of operating, maintenance and construction departments of the Canadian National Railways with headquarters at Toronto. With the taking over of the Grand Trunk Pacific lines, Mr. Hungerford in October, 1920, became vice-president in charge of operating and maintenance departments of the Canadian National and Grand Trunk Pacific railways and two years later, in October, 1922, he was made vice-president and general manager of the lines, with headquarters at Toronto, in which position he continued until his appointment in February, 1928, as vice-president in charge of operation, maintenance and construction of the Canadian National system, with headquarters at Montreal.

Railroading conditions have altered vastly since the days when Mr. Hungerford commenced service as an apprentice at Farnham in 1886. Then, woodburning locomotives were still in use; cars were coupled by old "links and pins," and airbrakes were unknown. Hours of work were long and pay was small, and apprentice training systems were not brought to the stage where they are today, when every effort is made to educate and

WOMEN ARE STUDYING LIQUOR CONTROL

NEW YORK, July 16.—Members of the women's organization for the national prohibition repeal in New York State are analyzing the liquor control policies of several Canadian provinces, Great Britain, Russia, Wales, Sweden, Norway and Denmark, in preparing their recommendations for a legislative programme to be placed before Franklin D. Roosevelt this year. The recommendations will embody the organization's detailed answer to the question of what should happen in the event of the Eighteenth Amendment's repeal.

Already the organization has drawn up the outline of its reply. It stands for the elimination of private profit from the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages, a provision in law to prevent the return of the saloon and to foster temperance education.

A report from a special group to state president Mrs. J. S. Sheppard states that in the countries and provinces whose systems are being analyzed, elimination of private profits "which sustain the bootlegger" is achieved either by direct government manufacture and sale, or issuance of charters to companies which turn back everything over a small percentage of profit. No federal law, the state group holds, would be workable, it is a state matter.

Alfred Allison, father of R. O. and C. E. Allison, died at Pincher Creek on Monday, aged seventy-nine. Other surviving members of the family are: George, at Waterton Lakes; Arthur Turner Valley; Laurence, Essex, Ontario; Earl, Galates, Montana, and daughters: Mrs. A. Lynch, Galates, Montana; Mrs. C. E. F. Hisecks, Lethbridge; Misses Grace and Maud, and his wife.

encourage the boys to learn while they earn and fit themselves for better jobs.

Locomotives of 1886 were pygmies compared with the 6100, 4100 and 5700 classes of engines used today on the Canadian National system, and the trains they hauled were mere toys compared with the huge freight and all-steel passenger trains which are now operated. Practices of handling locomotives in shops and on the road have altered with the growth in size of locomotives, which have had to be "shopped," and many of the improvements in shop practices in Canada have developed under the watchful eye of S. J. Hungerford, who has always held the admiration of those who worked under him because he knew every phase of the work so thoroughly himself.

Repairs Would Cost Plenty

Sunday Visitor To Farm Had Car Badly Mussed Up

A resident of Moncton, Ontario, who is noted for the spotless and shiny way in which he always keeps his car, went on a visit one Sunday to a friend living at the distance. The car was parked out in the open yard. The bull, seeing this strange object in the yard, had his curiosity aroused and came up to inspect it. Seeing his image reflected in the side of the well-groomed car, he presumed he saw a rival. He threw up the turf with his hoof and advanced to the conflict. He charged again and again until the rival was no longer visible and the side of the car presented a mass of scores and dents. Walking around the car, he perceived another rival on the other side and treated him similarly. No doubt, the bull had his satisfaction, but the owner is now premeditating the payment of a bill for having his car re-shaped and re-lacquered, and believes that the stall is the place for bulls.

Was Incurable Too

Visitor To Prison Showed Tact In Meeting Prisoner

A neat rebuff to tactlessness was that administered the other day by Adolph Lewisohn, who at eighty-three is interested in prison reform and likes to be shown through prisons. Visiting a celebrated bastille we hear, he stopped to chat and shake hands with the prisoners. The warden, who was along didn't like this very much, but said nothing until Mr. Lewisohn extended his hand to one peculiarly low-browed inmate. The warden couldn't bear it any longer. "Don't shake hands with him. He's incurable!" he warned. "I am incurable too," said Mr. Lewisohn, and shook hands cordially.

Defensive Tactics In Contract

Defensive procedure in contract is that part of the game which requires more experience, knowledge and practice than any other particular department. And this knowledge and experience is entirely apart from that needed in the actual defensive play of the cards.

The defensive bidder is in the position of a general in a battle in which the forces are not evenly matched and the bidder knows this fact and knows that his forces are inferior to the forces of the adversaries. And it therefore becomes necessary for the defensive bidder to make use of camouflage, subterfuge, and any other stratagems that come to hand. And this must be done with the two objectives of deceiving and intimidating the opponent, and at the same time, not deceiving the partner.

In all the systems of contract so far discussed the principles behind good defense tactics have only been touched upon. And the reason for this is, that, generally as far as defense goes, each particular deal is an original problem in itself. It then follows that any rules or principles laid down for defense must, for these reasons, be subject to much greater variation, than the principles of offensive bidding.

It may be said, after a partnership has opened the bidding, that the majority of the time, the adversaries are the opening bidder are immediately on the defensive. It has been shown that as a rule, the opening bid is made on defensive strength, and therefore immediately the opening bid is made, it becomes known to the adversary that the opening bidder has more than his share of high cards of the deal. And that therefore, if the partner of the opening bidder has an average high card hand, the balance of strength is in the hands of opening bidder and his partner. It follows, then, that, after the opening bid, the first adversary, unless holding a strong high card hand, knows that any bid he makes is made with only a slight chance that he will be allowed to play the hand. What, then, is the object of the overall of an opening bid, when the overcaller is weak in high card strength? Primary there are three objects:—1st. To give what information he can regarding his hand to his partner, while the bidding is at low contracts. 2nd. Any bid made immediately after the opening bid tends to disturb the smooth working of the usual response system between the opening bidder and his partner. To use a colloquialism, the immediate overall throws a "monkey wrench" into the machinery of the partnership language of the adversaries. 3rd. To suggest to the opening bidder that his partner has the hand of the overcaller is strong under the hope that this thought will so intimidate them that they stop the contracting short of game. These then, are three principal reasons for the defensive overall.

The danger of the weak overall lies in the fact that the partner of the overcaller may be tricked, and the defensive bidder finds himself in the position of having to take a substantial penalty. In other words, the weak overcaller is gambling and therefore the gamble he takes must be safeguarded by sufficient high cards, so that even if the overcaller's partner has a "bust" hand, the resulting penalty will not be too large.

The overcaller must always know whether he is vulnerable or not. If vulnerable the overall must not be made unless the hand of the overcaller has between four and five taking tricks in the bid made. When not vulnerable the overcalling hand may be bid a trick or two weaker.

What then are the requirements for an overall? The writer has laid down the following specifications for his own game and has found by experience, that the factor of safety in these specifications is great enough so that no serious penalty is incurred except very occasionally.

1st. When not vulnerable to overcall with a bid of one. Any five card biddable suit with 1½ honor tricks or any four card biddable suit and about two honor tricks. When vulnerable a biddable five card suit with 1½ honor tricks or a four card biddable suit with two honor tricks.

2nd. To overcall with a bid of two. When not vulnerable a good five card trump suit (four tricks) and at least 1½ honor tricks. When vulnerable a strong five card trump suit or longer (at least four trump tricks) and at least two honor tricks.

It must always be remembered that many hands are so distributionally strong that they may be used to overcall even when the hand contains no honor tricks. With this type of hand however, the writer believes that the overall should not be made immediately, but should be delayed until the second round of bidding. Then when it is bid, the first pass has shown to the partner that the hand does lack honor tricks. And in case of high bidding by the adversary, when the partner of a premature double by the partner of the overcaller is averted.

Explanations and Comments

Complains. Verse 1,3.—On the fifteenth day of the second month after leaving Egypt, the Caravan reached the wilderness of Sin, between Elim and Sinai. Here occurred the three recorded "murmurings" against Moses. Fortunate it was for him that he did not know in advance how many and how varied would be the complaints and rebellions of his people, nor how long he would have to endure them. "Would that we had died by the hand of Jehovah in the land of Egypt," they cried, "when we sat by the flesh-pots, where we did eat bread to the full." "By the hand of Jehovah" is a reference to the last plague inflicted upon the Egyptians. "They ate bread to the full" in Egypt, "for it was the habit of the Egyptians to eat well those employed in forced labor, just as slave owners commonly do their slaves."—Rawlinson.

"They remembered the flesh-pots of Egypt, but not their afflictions; the taskmaster's lash and other cruel oppressions. Human nature is ever the same. The spectacle of discontent magnify past blessings and present miseries alike."

They even accused Moses of having brought them forth into the wilderness to kill them all with hunger! How like the childish and extravagant words of complaint heard today their words sound.

"It is worthy of remark that those who are the most unworthy of liberty are wont to behave most ungratefully towards their deliverers."—Milton.

Mercy For Murmurers Promised, verses 4-12.—In the early part of the wilderness life the complaints of the people are treated with mildness, as if made by irresponsible children; but toward the end of their journeyings such complaints were severely punished, for after so many years' experience of God's providence, something better was expected of them. Now food is promised them, "bread from heaven."

The supply of manna has been variously explained; but though natural phenomena may indicate the direction in which aid was vouchsafed, they are inadequate in their ordinary exhibition, to account for the whole facts recorded. One theory, which has been favored from many, is that manna was simply the sugary exudation from the twigs of the tamarisks of Arabia, which the earliest Jews have called "man," or "mana," by the Arabs. It is used by them as a relish, and is abundant. Another idea has been advanced—that of its having been derived from the manna which fell from the clouds of various countries. There is an edible lichen which sometimes falls in showers several inches deep, the wind having blown it from the spots where it grew, and carried it onwards."—Cunningham Gelkie.

New Finger-Print Method

Reproduction Is Now Possible Without Aid Of Photography

A revolutionary method of reproducing finger-prints direct, without the aid of photography, has just been made public by Dr. Leung, assistant director of the (technical) laboratories of the Lyons (France) police department.

The new procedure eliminates the photographer, says Count A. N. Mirzaoff, writing in "Everyday Science and Mechanics" (New York):

"Finger-printing procedure, at present, is a complicated affair. The method generally uses paper, covered with a specially prepared gelatin solution, and carefully placed over the finger or hand-prints left by the criminal."

"A photograph of this is then made by the department's photographer and, after careful development, turned over to the expert for study and research."

"The invention of Dr. Leung completely revolutionizes this work. His method is more rapid and obtains a more perfect print than any other in use."

"Dr. Leung claims that much of the fine detail in the finger-print is lost by the old method because—first, the print is transferred to paper; then the paper with the print is photographed; then a photograph is made from the negative. In every operation some detail is lost. With his procedure, no detail whatsoever is lost; it is all there."

"His invention consists of a mixture which has a base of collodion, amylopectin, acetone, and ether. 'This solution is kept in a bottle, and is always ready for use; it is applied in this fashion:'

"The detective begins by first dusting the object on which finger-prints are found, with 'aminal black.' Over this is the poured sand of the mixture which, in a few seconds, forms a thin film, transparent as glass."

"This film can be lifted very easily off the object on which it is deposited; and on it is found the reproduction of the finger-print, with every detail faithfully recorded."

"There is no need, then, for making photographs, since the film can be carried about like a piece of paper. The traces of the finger-prints can be studied from both sides of the film because of its transparent quality."

"Dr. Leung's system is to be adopted by every police department in France."

"It is economical; it is accurate and dependable. A bottle replaces three photographers."

Study Polar Phenomena

Twenty-Six Countries To Form Chain Around the Arctic Circle

Seven men from the Canadian meteorological service will co-operate with 26 other countries in forming a chain around the Arctic circle, to study polar phenomena during the second international polar year program, beginning August 1.

J. E. Lilly is already at Resolute Island in Hudson Strait, and R. C. Jackson and C. Kinnear have left for Fort McMurray, Alta. They will be stationed however at Coppermine.

The second Canadian party, led by F. T. Davies, of McGill University, Montreal, includes B. W. Currie, of the University of Saskatchewan, S. McVeigh of Queen's University and John Rea, cook-observer. They will be stationed for at least 14 months at Fort Churchill.

The British expedition, destined for Fort Rae, on Great Slave Lake, was reported to be on its way.

"Yes," he acquiesced slowly. "It is getting late."

A look of concern spread itself over Jean's face.

"I think we ought to get the car out again and go and see if anything has happened," she said decisively. "They may have had a spill. Were they coming by motor?"

"No. Judy drove down to Newton Abbott in the dog-cart, and the Holifords proposed hiring some sort of conveyance from a livery stable."

"Well, I expect they've had a smash of some kind. I'm sure we ought to go and find out! Was Judy driving that excitable chestnut of yours?"

He shook his head.

"No—a perfectly well-conducted pony, as much as a motor will give them a quarter of an hour more. It doesn't show up by them, I'll run the car out and we'll investigate."

The minutes crawled by on leaden feet. Jean felt restless and uneasy and more than a trifle astonished that Burke should manifest so little anxiety concerning his sister's whereabouts. Then, just before the quarter of an hour was up, there came the shrill tinkle of a bicycle bell, and a boy cycled up to the gate and, springing off his machine, advanced to the cobble path with a telegram in his hand.

Jean's face blanched, and she waited in taut suspense while Burke ripped open the ominous orange-colored envelope.

"What is it?" she asked nervously. "Have they—?" It had never occurred to her that she succeeded in gathering the bare skeleton fact that something had gone radically wrong with the car's running powers.

Her apprehensions quickened. "Then that telegram from Judy—? It must be all right. She's not hurt, is she?"

He frowned a little. It did not seem to her quite the moment for jesting.

"Don't be ridiculous, Geoffrey," she said sharply. "We've got to get back somehow! What can you do?"

"I can't do anything more than I've done. Here we are and here we've got to stay."

"You know that's impossible," she said, in a quick, low voice.

Judy was not the one to be taken in by a sudden devil-in-a-care glint in his eyes.

"You never can tell before hand whether things are impossible or not. I know I used to think that heaven for it but for you to run me back home, Geoffrey. We ought to start at once."

"Very well, I'll go and get the car out," he answered. "I suppose it's the only thing to be done."

He moved off in the direction of the garage, Jean walking rather disconsolately beside him.

"I am disappointed!" she declared. "I just hate the sight of a telegraph boy! They always spoil things. I rather wonder you got your telegram delivered at this outlandish spot," she added musingly.

"Oh, of course I have to pay mileage. There's no free delivery to the back of beyond!"

As he spoke, Burke vanished into the semi-dark of the garage, and presently Jean heard sounds suggestive of ineffectual attempts to start the engine, accompanied by a muttered curse or two. A few minutes later aching back! Will it never stop? She's nearly desperate.

Burke reappeared, looking rather hot and flustered, with a black smudge of oil across his cheek.

"You'd better go back to the bungalow," he said gruffly. "There's something gone wrong with the works, and it will take me a few minutes to put matters right."

Jean nodded sympathetically and retreated towards the house, leaving him to tinker with the car's internals. It was growing chilly—the "cool of the evening" manifested itself early on Dartmoor—and she was not at all sorry to find herself indoors. The wind had dropped, but a curious, still sort of coldness seemed to be permeating the atmosphere, faintly moist, and as Jean stood at the window, gazing out half absently, she suddenly noticed a delicate blur of mist veiling the low-lying ground towards the right of the bungalow. Her eyes hurriedly scanned the landscape, but she saw nothing of the sort. The valleys between the distant firs were hardly visible. They had become mere basins cupping wales of wreathlike vapour which, even as she watched them creep higher, inch by inch, as though responding to some impulse of a rising tide, shivered and passionately tender.

"Before God, no! You'll be utterly safe, Jean, sweetest, beloved—I swear it!" His voice steadied and deepened. "Sacred as the purest love in the whole world could hold you." He was silent a moment; then, as the tension in her face gradually relaxed, he went on: "But the world won't know that!"

The note of tenderness was gone now, swept away by the resurgence of a fierce relentlessness—triumphant, implacable—that meant winning at all costs. "But the world won't know that!" he repeated. "For tonight, for this one sake—because a woman's reputation cannot stand the breath of scandal, you'll be compelled to marry me. You'll have no choice."

Jean stood quite still, staring in front of her. Once her lips moved, but no sound came from them. Slowly she raised her head, and she was relating exactly what had happened, her mind adjusting itself to the recognition of the trap in which she had been caught.

Her dream had come true, after all—horribly inconceivably true.

She had not even a moment's respite. Her dream had fallen suddenly into the hands of Burke's voice—mocking and exultant.

you'll be stamped with the mark of the beast for ever. It's too late to try and run away. It's too late."

CHAPTER XXVII

Into the Mist

Then that telegram—that telegram from Judy—I suppose that was all part of the plan."

Jean felt the futility of the question even while she asked it. The answer was so inevitable.

"Yes—briefly. I knew that Judy meant staying the night with her friends before she went away. She sent the wire—because I asked her to."

"Judy did that?"

There was such an immeasurable anguish of reproach in the low, quick-spoken whisper that Burke felt glad Judy was not the one to hear it. Had it been otherwise, she might have regretted the share she had taken in the proceedings, small as it had been. She was not a man, half-razed by love, in whose passion-blurred vision nothing counted save the winning of the one woman, nor had she known Burke's plan in its entirety.

"Yes, Judy sent the wire," he said. "But give her so much credit, she didn't know that I intended this. She only knew that I wanted another chance of seeing you alone—of asking you to be my wife, and I told her that you wouldn't come up to the bungalow unless you believed she would be there too. I didn't think you'd trust yourself alone with me again—after that afternoon at the inn—with blunt candour."

"No, I shouldn't have done."

So you see I had to think of something else. And it was you yourself who suggested this method."

"I'm—incredulously."

"Yes. Don't you remember what you told me that day I drove you back from Dartmoor?"

A woman's happiness depends upon her reputation."

She looked at him quickly, recalling the scattered details of that afternoon—Burke's gibes at what he believed to be her fear of gossiping tongues and her own answer to his taunts: "No woman can afford to ignore scandal!" And then, following upon his, his sudden, curious absorption in his own thoughts.

The remembrance of it all was like a torchlight flashed into a dark place, illuminating what had been hidden and inscrutable. She spoke swiftly.

"And it was then—that afternoon—you thought of this?"

He bent his head.

"Yes," he acknowledged.

Jean was silent.

"And the Holifords? Are there any such people?" she asked directly.

She scarcely knew what prompted her to put so purposeful and unimportant a question. Actually, she felt no interest at all in the answer. It could not make the least difference to her present circumstances.

Perhaps it was a little the feeling that this triumph of purpose of question and answer served to postpone the inevitable moment when she must face the situation in which she found herself, face it in its simple crudeness, devoid of unessential why and wherefores.

"Oh, yes, the Holifords are quite real," answered Burke. "And so is the plan for an expedition to one of the firs by night. Only it will be carried out tomorrow night, instead of tonight. Tonight is for the settlement between you and me."

The strained expression of utter, shocked incredulity was gradually leaving Jean's face. The threat was becoming real, and she knew now the quality of her opponent; the hard, reckless quality of Burke's voice left her no illusions.

"Geoffrey," she said quietly, "you won't really do this thing?"

If she had hoped to move him by a simple, straightforward appeal to the logic that might be in him, she failed completely. For the moment, all that was good in him, anything chivalrous which the helplessness of her womanhood might have invoked, was in abeyance. He was mere primitive man, who had succeeded in carrying on his life by the force of his will, and was prepared to hold her at all costs.

"I told you I would compel you," he said doggedly. "That I would let nothing in the world stand between you and me. And I meant every word I said. You've no way out now—except marriage with me."

The important decision of his tone roused her fighting spirit.

"Do you imagine," she broke out scornfully, "that—after this—I would ever marry you? . . . I wouldn't marry you if you were the last man on earth! I'd die sooner!"

"I dare say you would," he returned composedly. "You're too much grit to be afraid of death. Only you see, that doesn't happen to be the alternative. The alternative is a smirched reputation. Tarnished a little—after tonight—when I tell my friends that I married a woman who had been seduced."

"Do you really mean that?" he asked, smiling grimly.

She looked at him with a slow, measured glance of bitter contempt.

"Even a tarnished reputation might be preferable to marriage with you—more endurable," she added, with the sudden, tormented impulse of a trapped thing to hurt back.

"You don't really believe that!"

"Impetuously—I know. I know I could make you happy! You'd be the one woman in the world to me. And you're the one woman—more quietly—that you could endure a slurred name, Jean."

She made no answer. Every word he spoke only made it more clear to her that she was caught—bound hand and foot in a web from which there was no escape. Yet little as Burke guessed it, the actual question of "what people might say" did not trouble her to any great extent. She was too much her father's own daughter to permit a mere matter of reputation to force her into a distasteful marriage.

Not that she minimized the value of good repute. She was perfectly aware that if she refused to marry Burke, and he carried out his threat of detaining her at the bungalow until the following morning, she would have a heavy penalty to pay—the utmost penalty which a suspicious world exacts from a woman, even though she may be essentially innocent, in whose past there lurks a questionable episode.

No Difference

Reckless driving is frequently attended by serious and even fatal results. More frequently it is productive of no accident. But there are not two kinds of reckless driving, one dangerous and the other innocuous. The only way to put an end to reckless driving is to stamp upon recklessness wherever it is found.

Install Rain Gauges

Records Available To All Organizations

Three hundred and fifty more rain gauges will be set up in the prairie provinces according to a statement given by the Searle Grain Company, of Winnipeg, through H. G. L. Strange of the research department.

Following the meteorological conference held in Winnipeg early this year, the meteorological branch at Ottawa approved the recommendation for enlarged equipment of this nature but economy measures made purchase and establishment impossible.

However, the approval of the Dominion Department, the Searle Grain Company have had manufactured 350 additional gauges. There will be now a rain gauge at every Searle elevator in the three prairie provinces, and a total of 320 in addition to those already operated by the meteorological service of the Dominion.

Emphasis is laid on the fact that information from records obtained is available to every organization or individual interested and is in no way to be considered a private enterprise in this respect.

Origin Of The Mace

Symbol Of Authority Was Once a Popular Weapon

The mace, now a symbol of authority for the Speaker of the House of Commons, Lord Mayors, Mayors and other dignitaries, was originally a popular weapon. It was favored by the warlike clergy, to whom the sword was forbidden. Then its use can be traced to the Crusaders, when princes armed their guards with maces as the most convenient weapons to combat the attack of Assassins. (The Assassins—or Hashashins—were members of a fanatical Eastern sect who doped themselves with the drug hashish before their sorties.)

After the Crusades, the mace was retained by the followers of kings and princes and so became the symbol of authority as we now know it. The British House of Commons mace, by the way, is the third to be used in Great Britain. The first disappeared after the execution of Charles I.; the second, the "humble" which Cromwell ordered to be removed, passed through various hands and is understood now to be in a museum at Kingston, Jamaica.

THE EVERLASTING ARMS

To lie relaxed in Love! At last to know
The buoyant strength a weary swimmer finds
Beneath him when, worn out, he swims

For his struggle with the waves and winds!
To float, to drift like sea-weed or like spray:
To merge with ocean, with the singing sea

To let time's cares, forgotten, drop away,
Himself a fragment of eternity!

This is to know the Everlasting Arms
To be uplifted into peace at length,
Secure against all tempests and waves

Safe in the shelter of unflinching strength,
Unshedd all life's angry winds and waves
To be relaxed in Love that soothes and saves!

GENTLEMEN OF THE CLOTH

Before I became an editor, I was referred to as a gentleman of the cloth, meaning the clergy, I suppose. Well, after two weeks as an editor, I neither feel like a gentleman or have many clothes and by the end of the month I will likely have all my clothes pawned to buy something to eat. Alas! I feel that I have lost the grand title of "Gentleman" and I soon will be without clothes. Furthermore, I had two perfectly good "holes" to begin with and now I haven't any. After two weeks of hectic effort to get news, meeting some folks who looked as though they wanted to tell me to go to H—, in my desperation, I have about made up my mind to visit that place to see if there is anything stirring there. Believe it or not, trying to be an editor means WORK.

In addition to wearing out my holes, I have burned out all the cobwebs that inhabited my upper story, trying to think up something to put in this editorial. Surely, my dear people, you will have mercy on me this week and content yourselves with some of my nonsense.

In conversing with someone the other day, the topic was raised about the duties and requirements of a modern minister. This friend remarked that nowadays the average church of any size, in looking for a minister, were really measuring his ability by his success in putting over a high-powered organization, raising money to pay his own salary, building churches, speaking at clubs and getting people to join the church. He stated that "the average church did not want much soft stuff, such as LOVE. Love thy neighbor as thyself" was all out of date now. It's "get the other fellow before he gets you" nowadays. It does seem that in many cases this man was more or less correct in his statements. When a minister gets up in the pulpit, especially during these summer months, and faces a group of people before him, which sometimes do not exceed the number of fingers on his two hands, one would say that there is something wrong somewhere. Either the pulpit has lost its fire or the people have become frozen.

A little boy came home from church the other day and his mother asked him what the minister's text was, and he replied that it was "Many were called, but few were frozen."

Perhaps it would be a good thing to look for a minister that would be willing to preach the old-time Gospel message that will warm our hearts, for if we ever needed that kind of preaching, we surely need it now. Then, when the tired and hungry editor of the local paper comes to church, he will hear something besides the hashing of the weekly world news which he has been trying to absorb all week.

Let's all join in this week and give the preachers of our town the glad hand and a nicker or two, so he can enjoy a vacation at the lake, too. —W. H. Zook, new editor of the Wainwright Star.

SCHOOL OF RELIGION

J. S. Woodworth, M.P., Principal
Kest. of Queen's College, Kingston and Dr. Paul Jones, of Ohio, will be visiting lecturers at an important gathering in Edmonton in August. The School of Religion, which meets in St. Stephen's College, August 16-26, has been particularly fortunate this year in securing the services of outstanding men who are competent to deal with modern problems. Mr. Woodworth is a well-known parliamentarian, having represented Central Winnipeg in the Dominion House for the last eleven years. He will deal with the New Social Order.

Principal Kest. of Queen's, a well-known educationist, lecturer and preacher in the east, will deal with religious questions and their modern significance. Paul Jones, for some years a bishop in the Episcopal church in the U.S., has come before the public mind as international secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation. In recent years he has given attention to the education of the youth in that great non-denominational college in Yellow Springs, Ohio. Dr. Jones will deal with international problems concerning war and peace. In addition to these outstanding visitors, the staff of St. Stephen's, Premier Brownlee and other outstanding Canadians will occupy an important place on the programme.

TRAVELLING POTATOES

Dr. Blayney is suggesting a drive for bigger and better floods to be held annually. Early this spring he decided not to plant any potatoes, but since the flood his back yard is enriched with eighty fine looking hills of potatoes, which he is tending regularly. Nobody knows whose they were originally and none of the neighbors can actually prove ownership. He says they are his because they elected to settle down with him.

THE COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER

The Carlyle Herald is the most recent of Saskatchewan weekly newspapers to cease publication, the cause in each case being the same.

Commenting on the demise of his neighbor publication, Editor Dunbar, of the Estevan Mercury, gives expression to views that citizens of other communities might well ponder carefully: "A community journal is a public service condemned to operate as a private enterprise. If it is a success, it reflects credit on the community; if it fails, responsibility lies with the hapless publisher. In time of general depression advertising support shrinks to the vanishing point, job printing is peddled out to the cheapest bidder, readers have no scruples about defaulting their subscription dues and zero hour comes when the last gob of ink smears over the rollers and the stock of paper runs out."

Then the community, too late, realizes what an asset the local newspaper is and unless someone else can be induced to take on the thankless, profitless task that community imperceptibly but surely enters into a permanent decline. Its business is drawn from an ever-narrowing circle, real estate values disappear, buildings fall into disuse and the community ceases to be a factor in the life of the province, because if no longer has a medium of publicity or opinion. And the business that formerly sustained the solvent, newspaperless town is gradually absorbed by more ambitious neighbors. Human nature being what it is, people like to do business in centres that show signs of life, with people that enter for their trade.

The boys and girls who are being dumped back on freight trains, buffeted from city to city unfed, and told to keep on moving, must wonder sometimes why the country doesn't establish human slaughter houses at all divisional points. There must be a better way to handle this transient problem than has so far been tried. —High River Times.

CALGARY'S POLITICAL CHOICE

To a man 20 miles away it seems most amusing to read of the frantic wrigglings of Calgary taxpayers in trying to avoid and abolish the unbearable burden of unemployment relief.

Harking back a couple of years, does anybody in Calgary recall some most rosy and gilded promises about curing unemployment, putting a pudding in every dinner pail and utterly destroying poverty in Calgary?

If I were a Calgary taxpayer I would be ashamed to howl after I had received in full measure, and running over, exactly what I voted for two years ago. Calgary should be patriotic enough to swallow its pill without a shiver of nausea. It voted for this high tariff, isolationist, obscurantist self-destroying Toryism which we have and which is killing the trade, employment and morale of the world today.

So take your medicine and pay your taxes cheerily and with grateful political gusto. It is what you asked for. Why complain about the gracious gifts which have been showered upon you?

And the worst is yet to come. For I fervidly believe, that whereas you are feeding a paltry 5000 today on charity, you will be feeding fully 20,000 during the coming winter. And you will not dare refuse, for the golden reason that every one you refuse to feed will reduce the Tory stranglehold on Calgary by that number.

While we on the farm are simply vegetating on 10-cent butter, 6-cent eggs, 3-cent hogs, 4-cent fat cattle, 12-cent oats, 33-cent wheat, none of which we voted for, we are not doing one-tenth of the "hellering" that you people who voted for these curses are doing.—Bert Hoffman, Langdon, in Calgary Albertan.

Woodworth, M.P., visiting lecturer at the Alberta School of Religion of the United Church of Canada, honorary president of the League for Social Reconstruction, lecturing on "Our Highway to a New Social Order." Is any comment needed? The church has not gone bolshevik. Woodworth has consistently held to his one ideal from that moment when he was compelled to make his choice between respectability in the church and a precarious position as spokesman for the under-privileged. Civilization is catching up to Woodworth. Today his theories are recognized as leading to a higher social order without the necessity for a reign of terror.—A.F.K., in Drumheller Mail.

CORRESPONDENCE

Hillcrest, Alberta, July 27, 1932.
Editor, Blainmore Enterprise:
Dear Sir:—Would you please find space in your Enterprise for my following letter?

A special meeting was called by the ratepayers of Hillcrest, to determine why our local teachers are not given a chance to teach locally.

It was hoisted around by two of the trustees that our local teacher, who had acted as substitute, would get a position as teacher on the staff, but that nothing would be definite until after the meeting at the end of the term.

The meeting was held on June 28, 1932. There were three or four applications from our local teachers sent in. There were three or four positions vacant. A scrap of paper, two inches by six inches, was attached to the teacher's report that had acted as substitute, with the following on it: "Vacancies have been filled. Hillcrest School District No. 1916." No decency of date or signature of our secretary's name written on.

Our meeting called for Monday, July 25th, was duly held. The reports from local teachers were read out. Not one report was found to be unfit for the teachers to be given a chance to teach in our local school. In fact, one report was a splendid report, not one of the teachers engaged can surpass that report.

We found that our trustees had completely ignored our home teachers, because they could not agree, so just dumped their applications on one side and engaged outside teachers. Now, where the trouble was they would not answer, they would not commit one another.

The chairman of the trustees said they sat for quite a long time at their meeting, deciding definitely they would get outside teachers, yet two of the trustees had said confidentially the substitute was as good as engaged and the chairman himself was agreeable that our home teachers be given a chance to teach.

We also found out that three years ago an advertisement was inserted in the papers that no teacher need apply unless they had three years experience. That let again some of our local teachers out from teaching, because at the time they had had only two years experience. That insertion, we found out, was not correct—our secretary had advertised wrongly and was told about it by one of the trustees, but it was not rectified, but let go. At that time two teachers from Passburg and Burmis, relatives or friends of Mr. Bremner, the inspector, were put in our schools by him. They set the news around long before school term was over that they were going to teach at Hillcrest, and they did, just leaving this term.

Our Grade Eight teacher by the coming term was spoken of by our inspector at Christmas time, 1931, and was engaged and everything settled at Easter time of 1932, the present Grade Eight teacher being asked to resign. We have also another teacher that was asked to resign and they (the teachers) didn't keep it a secret either, but told themselves that they were fired and their report from the inspector was conditioned.

Now, this teacher has begged to be taken back, and the trustees have taken her back until Christmas on a conditioned report. A year ago, a local teacher was taken on with less credentials than our present local teachers have to offer. We have no grievance whatever of this teacher teaching in our school, but uphold our local teachers be given a chance. Our substitute teacher wasn't given a chance to teach until a letter from a ratepayer was sent in, but married independently was in preference. "What is wrong with our trustees?" We would like to know who is running our school, whether it be our trustee, secretary, inspector or —? Our chairman told us in the meeting he noticed that four or five names signed on the petition had no children and didn't see why these people should have any say or interest at all, but he sure was retaliated to by

You Are
A Very Disobedient
Person

DO YOU protest, and say that you're NOT a very disobedient person? Be patient, for a moment, and we shall see.

Look at the advertisements which you see in this newspaper, and other newspapers. Most of them bid you do something—something which, if done, would be advantageous to you, as well as being profitable to the advertiser. But do you always obey these advertisements? You do NOT! And what is your excuse?

Take your teeth, by way of example. Are you doing what you can to prevent or delay decay or loss? If you are like most persons, you are NOT. Yet you are being urged by advertisements to use regularly a product which, if used regularly, would keep your mouth and teeth in a really good health condition; and would enable you to keep your teeth sound, and keep away toothache.

It isn't the price of the product which keeps you from using it—it's just plain inertia and procrastination.

Then there's an electric or other kind of washer—this by way of example—able to buy it and on the installment plan. The advertisements bid you buy it, and give you good reasons why you should use this labor-saving, life-prolonging mechanism.

Has every man and every woman known to you obeyed the commands of the advertisements of this washer? They have NOT. And their resistance can not be put down to DISBELIEF. The explanation is: Most of us are shameless procrastinators—putting off, putting off, putting off all the time.

WHEN YOU read advertisements, see in them the untiring effort of manufacturers and institutions to cause you to do right things.

Take the life insurance companies, by way of example. Their advertisements urge all of us to insure our lives. Yet how stubborn most of us are! We resist the biddings of the advertisements and the canvasses of the salesmen of life insurance. We defer doing the obviously right thing, often for years!

SO WHEN you see and read advertisements and when you feel inclined to say, "What a shocking lot of money is spent by advertisers!" reflect on this idea: It is the stubborn disobedience of men and women that is to be condemned.

We should be grateful to those advertisers who pursue us all our life, bidding us to do things, which if done, would be advantageous to us.

these same ratepayers; they happen there has been no decrease in wages. I wonder if any other place in the Pass pays as much as we do. Principal's wages, $2300 per month; vice-principal, $1870; teachers, lowest $1100 to $1150, to $1300 and $1400 per term; secretary's wages, $65 or $60 per month; janitor's wages $150 per month.

Our taxes on cars, 80% when new, apart from your property—we sure have some kick. Thanking you for a space in your times, yours sincerely,

A RATEPAYER.

THIS MAN REALLY KNOWS

Absolute knowledge have I none, But my aunt's washerwoman's sister's son,

Heard a policeman on his beat, Say to a laborer on the street, That he had a letter just last week, Written in the finest Greek,

From a Chinese Coolie in Timbucktoo,

Who said the natives in Cuba knew, Of a colored man in Texas Town, Who got it straight from a circus clown,

That a man in Klondike heard the news, From a gang of South American Jews,

About somebody in Borneo, Who heard a man who claimed to know,

Of a swell society mademoiselle, Whose mother-in-law knows certainly well,

That her seventh husband's sister's niece, Has stated in a printed piece, That she has a son who has a friend,

Who knows when this Depression is going to end.

P.S.—We know him! Let us introduce you to old man "Confidence."

On Sunday last the Corbin football team won by five goals to three from Coal Creek team here. Play was very even in the first twenty minutes of the first half, when Ball, Corbin's inside left, headed a nice goal. Shortly afterwards, McVey put Corbin two in the lead. Score at half time, Corbin 2, Coal Creek nil. The second half opened fast with Coal Creek pressing hard. In fifteen minutes they had tied the score, making Corbin realize that they had to work if they hoped to win. McVey came through with two fine goals in quick time, and although Coal Creek pressed hard, they could not hold the Corbin team down, and Corbin added another. Coal Creek pressed again and were rewarded with a goal, but they were too far behind to do any good against a winning team, who were taking advantage of every break. Teams: Corbin—Dawson, R. Jackson, R. Lilly, E. Coates, F. Jackson, L. Elms, Corbett, Ball, McVey, Oakley and Herd; Coal Creek—Chester, Milburn, Johnson, R. Ferguson, McVey, Perren, Boherty, Simpson, Atherton, Townsley, T. "What a pretty name," remarked the traveller. "I have heard of girls being christened after their precious stones, but never have yet met one called 'Onyx'."

"Ah don't know naughting 'bout no precious stones," drawled the negro. "Mah old man had been in jail for fourteen months when dat child was born, and dat is why Ah calls her 'Onyx'—short for 'onyxpected.'"

"Theoretically, yes," rejoined the modern bride, "but from a practical standpoint it will be advisable to order dinner for two."

A good many Westerners have wondered if Ontario is as pure as it lets on to be. Well, here is a little light. Not long ago, a High River man ordered himself a drake from Ontario. The bird arrived in due time, but it was 24 hours before the new owner got to collect him. The traveller from the East showed signs of exhaustion and looked thirsty, so it was decided to take him over to the hotel for a breacer. The drake was staked to a flag on beer, which he drained to the last bead. A second long drink was set before him and he buried his nose. After the third he seemed satisfied and stalked out, carrying his likker like a true gent from Ontario. Toronto should look into this.—E.X.

The Board of Trade banquet at the Cosmopolitan hotel on Thursday evening last was quite successful, being attended by thirty-five members. The principal item on the programme was an address on "Coal" by Dr. McKay, Dominion government geologist, which was illustrated by lantern slides. The address proved exceedingly interesting, but regret was expressed that local coal companies were not represented at the meeting. The meeting was presided over by President L. L. Morgan. Prior to the address, the minutes of the previous meeting of the board were read and adopted, and other business transacted.

A matter of considerable interest, arising out of the minutes of a recent Board of Trade meeting was that of creating a vacant space east of the C.P.R. station, both sides of the railway tracks, into a park. This matter has been considered quite a number of times in recent years, and it is really time that something more tangible were done. Railway depots galore from the Atlantic to the Pacific coasts can boast of beautiful depots, gardens, or parks, and absolutely none have a better opportunity to provide one than has Blaimore. And repeatedly, the C.P.R. has made liberal offers to co-operate in the matter.

A determined effort to halt the ruining of lenses and lamps on automatic block signals and insulators on telegraph poles in yards at important terminals, is being staged by the railways, who report destruction of such property has been carried on in a wholesale manner by mischievous boys since the closing of schools. Automatic signals, when damaged, become improperly displayed, thus creating a serious handicap for moving trains, with life and property endangered. Telegraph wires, with insulators broken, are known to get crossed, resulting in confusion of orders and placing trains in a hazardous position. The most serious damage to signals and insulators is reported on the right-of-way of the Canadian National Railway, where police are vigilantly watching for offenders. These will be prosecuted to the limit of the law, which, under the criminal code, carries years of imprisonment.

"What kind of a rabbit, Daddy?"

"A daddy rabbit, my son."

If the Western Canada crop comes through to maturity, without serious mishap, it will go a long way toward changing the economic situation in this part of Canada. A. E. Warren, vice-president of the Canadian National Railways, said in a recent interview: "One good crop will not, of course, bring things back to normal," stated Mr. Warren, "but across the whole of the prairie provinces things look better than they have done for many years. Practically all areas have enjoyed sufficient moisture to ensure good growth and filling of the wheat. Southern Saskatchewan, which last year suffered severely from drought, is in good shape this year, generally speaking, and the people are showing a remarkable display of courage in their determination to stick things out. In all sections of the West, people have adjusted themselves to present economic conditions, and the harvesting of the promised heavy crop will, of course, bring about a heavy railroad movement of wheat to the lake head and sea board, and this will help the unemployment situation by providing work for the workers required."

In a public statement issued last week, Hon. Perrin Baker, minister of education for Alberta, said that the province will advance no further loans to normal students; that the need for such assistance had passed with the surplus of teachers that is apparent. It is no longer practical for the province to finance prospective teachers. There is a large unpaid balance due the province, principally by graduates who have not found employment.

Vancouver Man Suffered For Twelve Years

Charles J. Payne, a well-known citizen of Vancouver, B. C., recently said: "Stomach trouble and constipation had been pulling me down for 12 years. I'd be as nervous at night as I could get to sleep for hours. My circulation was poor and I had severe rheumatic pains in my knee. The reason I got from danger was that I was cured. I now eat anything I want, sleep better and the pains and constipation are gone. And the greatest thing of all is my relief from constipation. I want all my friends to know that there really is a safe medicine that does for me."

The Lawns Of England

George Arliss, the famous actor whose picture characterization of Desires is one of the outstanding achievements of the motion picture industry in recent years, in discussing in a magazine article the development of the movies and talkies, says: "It's like the lawns of England. One man with all the good intention in the world cannot produce them; one generation cannot make them; it takes the accumulated care and devotion and growth of centuries to bring them to their velvet beauty."

And if this is true of the justly famed lawns of England, is it not equally true in every walk and achievement of life; even of the world? The world has progressed upward through the centuries. Man has grown and developed from the cave-dweller and the aboriginal forest dweller to his present degree of intelligence and civilization. It has taken many centuries, thousands of generations, yet man has not yet stopped growing, developing, progressing.

Looking back through the pages of history we can trace the onward march of civilization. It has had its setbacks; at certain periods in the world's history it almost stagnated. But the light was never wholly extinguished, and out of these dark ages there came a greater, stronger light.

Man is an ambitious animal. He is also an impatient one, and it is well that he should be so. He is never content with things as they are, but is ever striving for something better. But oftentimes he allows his impatience to get the better of his judgment. Like a child he wants to walk before he has gained the strength and experience to even creep, and the result is a tumble. And if he falls hard enough he learns a lesson he does not easily forget. He profits by it, moves a bit more slowly and warily, and thus makes real and lasting progress.

But just as no child learns through the experiences of another child, so each generation has to make its own mistakes, learn its own lessons, bitter and painful though they may be. But unlike a child, men and women of one generation with their developed intelligence, can and should profit by the mistakes of earlier generations. There is always some justification for a person who makes a mistake once, but there is no excuse for him if he repeats it. And by now man should at least have learned the lesson that there is no short cut to perfection; rather he should be thoroughly convinced of the fact that, "like the Lawns of England," perfection can only be attained through years of effort, by the accumulated care and devotion of each succeeding generation, and not by one generation impatiently declaring that all that has gone before was wrong and proceeding to tear down what has been built up and to replace it with some untried thing of their own devising.

Yet this is one of the gravest dangers that confronts the world today, and if we are not careful and on guard, and place a check upon our impatience, and resist the temptation to forget and disregard the lessons of the past, and to adopt new and untried theories, we may, instead of making progress, be retrograding, reverting to some of the evils of the dark ages, and endangering the light that has been glowing steadily since the dawn of time.

This danger confronts us in these times because something has slipped, some difficulties have arisen which for the moment seem to defy solution, and in our gropings many of us are inclined to lay the blame on the whole complicated machine of our present-day civilization and be prepared to smash it altogether rather than patiently seek out the one or two cogs which are not meshing properly and thus have thrown the machine out of gear.

For example, our present system of government is the result of the accumulated care, devotion, and ripe experience of the greatest minds throughout the centuries of the past. It has been developed through one great crisis after another. It has been shaped and molded by the wisdom of many experiments, with the weak and faulty discarded, and the strong and true tested throughout the years retained and developed. Impatient minds today, and self-seekers who pander to the current feelings of impatience, discontent and insistence upon the application of some immediate and sovereign remedy for all our ills, are either blinded themselves or seek to blind others to the infallible truth that all permanent progress, all lasting reforms, are slow of growth.

The mushroom grows to maturity in a night, and passes as quickly, but the oak tree which resists the storms for hundreds of years is slow of growth. But what man of intelligence would exchange an oak for a mushroom?

There was a period in the world's history when all land was owned by the Crown, the government of that day. Private individuals were not allowed to own an acre that was not theirs. With the growth of civilization and fuller recognition of the rights of man, the right of ownership of property was extended to all. Yet because many of these individual owners are today inefficiently, the demand has been raised that all land be again nationalized, and all people revert from being land owners in their own right to tenants of the state. Such advocates are advocates of a policy of despair, they lack vision and initiative; they confess their inability to correct existing faults by a process of reform, and throw up their hands, would go back hundreds of years to a system under which man was a chattel rather than a free born citizen.

And what these blind leaders of the blind advocate in regard to land they urge in connection with the whole economic structure of our modern civilization. Instead of looking forward, they look backward; instead of visioning progress and a better world improving from year to year and from generation to generation, they would sweep away the work and experience of centuries to return to a more primitive state. They have failed to learn the lesson of the "Lawns of England," and because a few weeds or dandelions have grown up in the grass, they would plow up the whole lawn, return to the virgin soil, and begin all over again.

The true course for the world is to eradicate the weeds, but preserve the lawn, either re-seeding the spots requiring such treatment, or converting them into still more beautiful beds of flowers, adding variety and greater beauty to the lawn itself.

In hours of present discouragement and impatience, let us remember the "Lawns of England."

Ireland Pays the Price

Loses Biggest Customer, Through de Valera's Break With England
France, Holland and Denmark must regard President de Valera as one of their best friends. For years they have looked with longing eyes on the immense British market for agricultural products, but they could sell only what Ireland could not supply and were also faced with a high tariff, which the Free State was not. Now England slaps a 100 per cent. tax on Irish goods, accompanied by a blunt statement from Dominion Secretary J. E. Thomas, to the effect that England could not allow a solemn agreement between two members of the British Commonwealth to be treated as a scrap of paper.

The Valera's break with England may have been a fine gesture at the Sassenach, but in making it he lost the customer who took 90 per cent. of what Ireland had to sell. The Guinness breweries at Dublin, famous for their stout, and Henry Ford and his tractor plant at Cork, will probably continue exporting to England, but this will be due largely because of the individual nature of their merchandise.

The Free State is primarily agricultural, and England is its natural outlet. Ireland, by reason of its geographical location, cannot export as advantageously to any other country. Continental Europe does not urgently require anything Ireland produces that cannot be equally well, and probably more cheaply, supplied by France, Holland and Denmark. It looks as though de Valera, for all his brave words, may have to do a lot of explaining to his people before the year is out.—Detroit Saturday Night.

After Three Years

Makes All the Old Stops On Long Milk Route
That a horse can remember more than three years was proven at Kendallville, Indiana, by Fannie, a 22-year-old mare that hauled a milk wagon for Seth Whitford, dairyman, for seventeen years.

In 1929 Whitford finally motorized his business and retired Fannie on a well-earned vacation. Recently the milk truck was wrecked. In the emergency the old mare and milk wagon were pressed back into service.

At the familiar rally of milk bottles the mare pranced proudly down the farm lane to the highway and to town, and practically driverless she made all the old stops over the five-hour route without a single mistake.

Keeping Thirty-Six Until Parents Pay Their Fees
A teacher at a girls' school at Torda, a town in the New Rumanian province of Transylvania, has refused to allow 36 of his pupils to return home until their parents have paid their fees. The girls are the children of officials who for months have not received any pay.

Some of the parents comfort themselves with the reflection that the director will now have to feed their children.

This Wedding Was Different

Attendees For Circus Owner's Daughter Were Four Lions—Two young lions and two lionesses are to act as "best men" and "bridesmaids" at the wedding at Bordeaux, France, of Mile. Rabasson, daughter of a circus proprietor, and M. Franchi, a circus artist. The chief guests will include a bearded woman, the man with a bird's head, two giants, three dwarfs, wrestlers, strong men and women and three men lion-tamers.

The Oil Of The People—Many oils have come and gone, but Dr. Thomas' Eucalypti Oil continues to maintain its position and increase its sphere of usefulness each year. Its sterling qualities have brought it to the front and kept it there, and it can truly be called the oil of the people. Thousands have benefited by it and would use no other preparation.

May After British Uniform

Blotch hats with wide brims, jackets with leather buttons and knickerbockers, will probably be the uniform of the British soldier before long. A committee of the war office is now considering the abolition of the present field-service cap, close-fitting khaki jacket and heavy trousers and puttees.

Toothache and neuralgia are instantly relieved with Douglas' Egyptian Liniment. A quick, sure remedy. Also recommended for burns, sprains, sores and inflammation.

"Don't you think so, dear?"

"No. We've been walking round the park for an hour and not a single soldier has kissed you!"—The Humorist, London, England.

Must Remodel Freighters

Opening Of St. Lawrence Waterway Will Call For Different Type Of Lake Vessels

Complete revision in design of Great Lakes freighters will take place upon the completion of the St. Lawrence waterway, shipping experts believe. News that an agreement between Canada and the United States for the waterway has been completed created considerable speculation in shipping circles.

When the waterway is finished, vessels will be able to go from the head of the lakes direct to the Atlantic ocean. And on this fact hinges the possibility of many changes in lake freighters.

The majority of the lake boats are not equipped for salt water. The long open deck of the lake boats, with its many hatches, are not regarded as practical for coast use.

However, radical change in design of inland-water boats would be an expensive proposition. Millions of dollars worth of unloading and loading machinery has been installed at the ports, and most of it is peculiarly adapted for the open-lake type of vessel.

Long Standing Asthma. Many have suffered so long from asthma and have tried so many so-called remedies they think that there is no real help for them. They should read the letters received by the manufacturers of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy from hundreds of cases once as desperate as their own. Even in long-neglected cases this famous preparation brings prompt help.

Planning Air Route

Expeditions Pushing Into The North To Locate Bases
Two expeditions are pushing into the north to lay the groundwork for a trans-Atlantic air route to Europe via Canada and the Arctic.

Pan-American Airways disclosed that H. C. Watkins, British explorer, was scheduled to sail from Copenhagen at once to establish two bases in the vicinity of Angmagssalik, Greenland.

The Michigan Pan-American Airways Greenland expedition under the direction of R. L. Belknap, of the university of Michigan, also is on the way to a base 100 miles north of Upernivik, and several hundred miles north of the Arctic circle.

Worries Virginia Family
Leaf On Tree In Yard Carries Several Letters

Residents of Clarkburg, Virginia, are startled. An "alphabet" tree has been discovered and the owners are worried about its significance.

When a tree in the yard of Isaac Spoyt blossomed forth it bore inflated leaves. Plainly inscribed on one leaf were the letters N-G-E-O-C.

Spoyt and his family are convinced it means something, but just what it might be is the mystery.

It was a golden spike, suggesting the vast mineral wealth now open to Canadian enterprise, and the Premier swung his mallet forcefully and true, like the men who built the railway to tap the riches of the north.

Want Canadian Flax

Linon Industry Of Northern Ireland Would Use Canadian Product

The linen industries in northern Ireland would gladly buy Canadian-grown flax if that commodity could be secured and one of its objects in coming to this country is to survey the flax-growing situation in Canada, said Lewis Gray, prominent Belfast industrialist, who attended the Imperial Conference. At present practically all of the flax bought by the Belfast linen trade is grown in Russia.

TO OPEN WAY FOR FREER TRADE WITHIN EMPIRE

Ottawa, Ont.—The Imperial Economic Conference passed, swiftly from opening declarations of policy to the less impressive consideration of methods of power. Heads of delegations met and decided to appoint five committees:

- (1) Promotion of trade within the commonwealth.
- (2) Customs administration.
- (3) Commercial relations with foreign countries.
- (4) Monetary and financial questions.
- (5) Methods of economic co-operation.

No appointments to the committees were made. Each delegation is to meet separately, decide on its nominees, then formal appointments will be made.

Meanwhile all delegates are keenly discussing the offer of wider preference with which Premier Bennett opened the conference. The seven ministers of the British delegation are to hold a series of "cabinets" to examine the Bennett proposal in all its implications.

Under the present British tariff system, wheat and meat are on the free list. Imports of wheat and meat from the dominions therefore receive no tariff preferences in the British market.

Mr. Bennett proposes the United Kingdom "shall extend the principle of her tariff preferences to natural products." Wheat and meat are not specifically mentioned but they obviously come within the scope of the Bennett scheme. There possibly will be the chief problem of the British delegation in determination of its attitude. For the moment, however, the British content themselves with reticence of Mr. Baldwin's words at the opening session—that the British delegation will study the proposal sympathetically on the lines laid down by Mr. Bennett, that they will do their utmost "to co-operate with goodwill to accomplish the purpose he has in view."

Mr. Bennett's proposals climaxed a day without parallel in the history of the Dominion. Delegates from the nations of the Empire had gathered in the Memorial Chamber of the Peace Tower, and there, in homage to Canada's war dead, had lain wreaths on the altar of remembrance. The chamber of the House of Commons presented such a scene has never known before—Premier Bennett and the Canadian delegates in the seats of government; facing them, in what are normally the seats of opposition, a former British Prime Minister, the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, five other members of the British cabinet; and on either side the seats of members of the House filled with delegates and advisers from all the far corners of the British commonwealth.

On the assumption effective operation of the agreement would not be impaired by unfair competition, Mr. Bennett, on behalf of Canada, proposed to grant to the United Kingdom:

- (1) Extension of the free list;
- (2) Retention of the existing preferences in favor of Great Britain;
- (3) Increased preferences in respect of a selected list of articles in which Great Britain is especially equipped to supply the Canadian market without incurring efficient Canadian enterprise.

In exchange, Canada asked:

- (1) The retention of existing preferences;
- (2) Their effective extension to those other natural and processed products of which the United Kingdom is an importer.

Irish Issue Shelved

Ottawa, Ont.—The differences between Great Britain and the Irish Free State will not be projected into the deliberations of the Imperial Conference. This was made clear by Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Dominions secretary in the British government, and also by Sean T. O'Malley, vice-president of the Free State executive council.

Montreal, Que.—The SS. Canadian Commander, now lying in Halifax harbor, has been sold to an Indian syndicate. This is the first Canadian National steamship to be sold in accordance with the decision of the directors to reduce the fleet. The sale price was stated to be approximately $25,000.

Dictatorship For Prussia

Marital Law Has Been Declared In Berlin, Germany.

Berlin, Germany.—The federal government set up a dictatorship over the entire state of Prussia, declaring martial law in Berlin and the province of Brandenburg and sweeping out of office every member of the Prussian state cabinet.

This drastic action precipitated the worst constitutional conflict since the founding of the Reich in 1871.

The Prussian authorities, declaring the dictatorship to be contrary to law, refused to yield to the demands of the federal government except by force. In many cases force was used.

Berlin was under heavy guard to-night, and machine guns were mounted in the court in front of the federal chancellery. Every precaution was being taken to prevent disorders.

Under an emergency decree issued by President Paul von Hindenburg, Chancellor Franz von Papen became federal commissioner administering the state of Prussia. He named Lord Mayor Franz Bracht of Essen as deputy commissioner. One of Bracht's first acts was to attempt to take over the state ministry of interior, and he encountered plenty of trouble.

That ministry has for years been under Dr. Karl Severing, sworn foe of the present federal regime and of its move to sweep away the state government. When Severing refused to hand over the ministry, a police captain threatened to drag Dr. Severing out. So Dr. Severing yielded his post. He was not arrested.

Sends Largest Group

United Kingdom Has Greatest Representation At Conference

Ottawa, Ont.—Delegates, official and technical advisers, personal staff secretaries and unofficial counsellors to the Imperial Conference number 272. Of that number the United Kingdom has the largest proportion, with 78, which is one more than Canada itself.

Great Britain has sent seven delegates, 55 advisers, members of personal staffs, business consultants, unofficial counsellors and secretariat.

Canada's delegation totals 13, with 50 advisers and a secretariat of 14.

The smallest group is from Southern Rhodesia, whose premier, Hon. H. W. Moffatt, heads a party of eight. The other empire nations distribute their representation as follows:

Australia, two delegates and 20 others; New Zealand, two delegates and 14 others; South Africa, three delegates and 22 others; the Irish Free State, three delegates and 17 others; Newfoundland, two delegates and seven others; India, eight delegates and nine others.

Accommodation for this large number has been found in the House of Commons Building, where a special directory of information has been issued regarding them.

"It is my belief that 1932 will witness the beginning of a return to happier and more prosperous times and a great revival of world trade."

Geneva, Switzerland.—A resolution ending the first phase of the world arms conference was drawn up by the general commission of the conference.

Edmond Herriot, French Premier, announced the four powers—Britain, France, United States and Italy—had agreed in principle that land artillery should be limited. Herriot welcomed the text as "a triumph for the League."

Ottawa, Ont.—The trade agreement between Canada and New Zealand has increased the flow of Canadian goods to the southern Dominion, says a statement issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce. Exports to New Zealand doubled in June, reaching a value of $327,578.

London, England.—Prince George, youngest son of the king, has advanced another step in his naval career with appointment as personal naval aide-de-camp to his majesty.

Cabinet Shuffle In Italy

Five Ministers and Eleven Under Secretaries Displaced

Rome, Italy.—Dino Grandi, Italian foreign minister has resigned in a far-reaching cabinet shake-up ordered by Premier Mussolini.

Five ministers and 11 under-secretaries were displaced in the shake-up. Mussolini retained for himself two of the vacated portfolios.

These constituted the first changes in the cabinet since September, 1929. The shake-up was regarded as another "rotation" to bring new blood into the government without any change of policy.

The five ministers who resigned were Grandi; Alfredo Rocco, minister of justice; Antonio Mosconi, minister of finance; Prof. Balduino Guiseppe Bottai, minister of corporations. Mussolini, who already was minister of interior as well as premier, kept for himself the ministries of foreign affairs and corporations.

Among the 11 under-secretaries who were displaced were Il Duce's own right-hand man, Francesco Giunta.

May Last Five Weeks

Cautious Estimate Made For Deliberations Of Imperial Farley

Ottawa, Ont.—Malcolm MacDonald, M.P., son of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, thinks the deliberations of imperial conference delegates might last "five weeks," which is the cautious estimate of everybody. What emerges from the five weeks remains to be seen; but if the impressiveness of personal means anything, the results should be thoroughly comprehensive.

With the exception of Newfoundland's Prime Minister, the personnel of the conference is complete. Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council, heads a British delegation in which no fewer than 78 persons are the other national groups.

SUGGESTS PROBE OF EMPIRE WHEAT QUOTA SCHEME

Ottawa, Ont.—The Imperial Economic Conference means more to Canada than its own immediate results, stated Premier J. T. M. Anderson of Saskatchewan, in a talk with the Canadian Press. He sees the gathering as a possible forerunner of a broader conference to solve world economic problems.

"The British Empire is showing the way to the world in the attempt to lead the world out of its troubles," he said. "The Empire Conference can go a long way in improving conditions but further steps must be taken. Besides its own work, however, the conference can lay down a groundwork for extensive later developments."

Commenting on the forecasts that an empire wheat quota would not be one of the results of the Ottawa conference, Dr. Anderson said the Saskatchewan Government's position was that the quota plan should be fully investigated. He realized the obstacles in the way of an empire quota—including the fact that Canada exports double the wheat the empire can consume—but he thought a subsequent world conference might bring about more equitable distribution and a strengthening of the price fabric.

RAMSAY MACDONALD'S CROWNING ACHIEVEMENT

To bring about a successful conclusion to the Lausanne Reparations Conference when all hope of a satisfactory settlement was lost is the great achievement of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain. Ramsay MacDonald is shown standing between Herr Von Papen, German Chancellor (left), and M. E. Herriot of France (right), whom he brought together and persuaded to settle their differences. His Majesty the King sent the British Premier a telegram of congratulations following the signing of the accord.

Sir Henry Thornton Resigns

Retires As President and Chairman Of Canadian National

Ottawa, Ont.—Resignation of Sir Henry Thornton as president and chairman of the Canadian National Railways has been accepted by the board of directors and the Dominion Government. His resignation is effective August 1.

Coincident with this announcement came a statement that S. J. Hungerford would be acting president of the system in charge of operation and construction.

Future plans of Sir Henry have not been disclosed. He issued a statement in Montreal, but gave no intimation of his future plans.

Simultaneous with announcement of Sir Henry's intention to sever his connection with the C.N.R., after a few months less than 10 years service, rumors circulated that United States were seeking his services. One report was that a railway of the western states had made Sir Henry an offer, but it was officially said at Montreal that no such offer had been accepted.

Protecting Grain Ships

Radio Ensures Safety For Vessels Out Of Churchill

Churchill, Man.—When the first Atlantic ships head into Hudson Straits on their way to Churchill to load grain next month, they will be constantly protected by a series of radio stations located at strategic points throughout the Far North.

The ships will first come in contact with the radio station at Resolution Island, near the eastern entrance of the straits. Then there is Cape Hope Advance, about midway through the straits. Farther on is Nottingham Island base, at the west entrance to the channel.

These three stations, plus a fourth at Churchill, are known as direction finding stations. This means that the captains of vessels can communicate with the several stations, during fog, for instance, and his position may be plotted on charts.

Child Dragged To Death

Joliette, Que.—Four-year-old Paul Lamarche was dragged to his death by a cow after his older brother had tied him to the animal's tail, it was revealed at a coroner's inquest here. After securing his brother to the cow's tail, the older Lamarche scared the animal and Paul was instantly killed.

U.S. Losing British Trade

Through New Tariffs and Suspension Of Gold Standard

London, England.—The United States has lost more than half of its immense trade with Great Britain since this country adopted a tariff policy six months ago, has been disclosed.

When the national government came into power last fall, Britain was the biggest customer of the United States next to Canada, buying $50,000,000 worth of American goods every month. Today that monthly business has fallen to $21,000,000.

"Business men in the United States can blame world conditions for much of their vanished trade. But it is Britain's new tariffs, aided by the suspension of the gold standard, which have struck the severest blow."

Combined, these two factors now make the average United States product subject to a virtual duty of 50 per cent. Until recently, when the anti-dumping measures were replaced, the duty was virtually 80 per cent, on some of the chief exports from the United States.

So far the United States has had no grounds for making representations, since there is no evidence yet of discrimination.

Few United States manufacturers have found it worth while to establish branch factories in Britain so as to escape the tariff. The outcry, they say, is too great for the advantages to be derived.

Grains and cotton alone of the bigger United States exports are holding their own.

Dakota Farmers Hope For Dollar Wheat

Plan To Hold Grain Unit Level Is Reached

Tolna, N.D.—Across the prairies of North Dakota, expected to produce one-sixth of the United States' wheat output, the farmers are heard to exclaim: "Hold the grain for $1 a bushel."

If sponsors are successful, the cry will be taken up throughout the United States.

Del Willis, Tolna farmer, is chairman of the organization which has stirred the farmers in more than 400 North Dakota townships to pledge holding their wheat, effective August 1, unless, and until the dollar level is reached.

"This period of low prices finally has brought us to a position where it is either sink or swim," Willis said.

"We will hold our wheat until there is a demand for it at the set price of one dollar per bushel, and then we will sell only 10 per cent of it one month," Willis continued. "We will make an orderly marketing system."

He said the plan, launched here less than a week ago, has been enthusiastically received.

The agreed price will be based on Winnipeg quotations. The dollar will be for the best wheat, with discount for lower grades.

IRISH FREE STATE WILLING TO BUY OUR PRODUCTS

Ottawa, Ont.—The Irish Free State offers a wide market for Canadian flour and bacon, and in return for reciprocal advantages in the Canadian market for certain commodities the delegates of that country would be prepared to grant this Dominion substantial preferences. Representations along these lines will, it is understood, form the case of the Free States at the present Imperial Conference.

At the moment Canada enjoys a considerable market in the Irish Free State for bacon, it was declared here by individuals close to the Free State delegation. They cited that in the first three months of the current calendar year imports of bacon from Canada had increased 25 times over those for the corresponding period last year. While it was true the Free State itself was an exporter of bacon, it was equally true Ireland was a heavy importer of cheaper brands. In supplying that demand Canada would be offered concessions, it is understood, under certain conditions.

Another element in connection with which the Free State delegation was free to bargain was wheat. Provided that Canada would extend reciprocal preferences, the Free States, it is understood here, are prepared to give substantial concessions to Canadian wheat.

On the other side of the aisle are the reciprocal benefits which the Free State will ask for its woollens, its liquors and malt beverages.

EMPIRE GUESTS WELCOMED AT OTTAWA DINNER

Ottawa, Ont.—While hundreds of candles blinked on bright green tablecloths, Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada, welcomed once again the delegates to the Imperial Economic Conference. In a setting of rare beauty, nearly 700 distinguished guests from all parts of the British Empire joined in good fellowship. It was the first government dinner, and Canada gave of her best.

The scene was one which impressed itself upon the memory. Green was the prevailing color. Along the side of the great dining room the long head-table, covered with its green damask and ornamented with a lavish display of silver and flowers, focussed attention. Off from it ran 11 other shorter tables, each covered with the same green coverings. Around the great room, in the soft light of the chandeliers, waited waiters, flitted across of white-clad waiters. From the balconies, where an over-flow gathering was seated, music came.

At the tables sat men famous in the history of the British empire. The center figure at the head table, the Prime Minister Bennett, sat under a group of flags—the flags of all the sister nations in the British Commonwealth represented at the conference. Down the long table were the heads of the delegations—Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, the Irish Free State, Newfoundland and Southern Rhodesia. Interspersed with these leaders were their wives, and also members of the Dominion government.

Beautiful dresses shimmering forth all the colors of the rainbow, shone against the background of conventional black and white worn by the men. No uniforms were worn, but many of the distinguished guests wore their orders and decorations.

Speeches, which did not start until after 10 o'clock, were brief.

As Prime Minister Bennett rose, the gathering arose with him. Cheer after cheer greeted him, and green napkins waved like leaves around the room.

"This is a family gathering," said Mr. Bennett in happy mood. He referred to the fact that "men of great distinction in their own countries" were there. Canada numbered among her guests three former prime ministers, a former lord chancellor of Great Britain, a present chancellor of the exchequer. The premier of Southern Rhodesia, H. W. Moffatt, was a nephew of the "great missionary, Livingstone." Newfoundland, which had succeeded in convincing eminent judges "that a part of Canada belonged to her," had sent her minister of education. It was a matter of pride to Canada to have these and the other eminent delegates present.

The prime minister gave the toast to "Our Guests." It was honored standing.

Then Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin head of the British delegation arose. Again applause sounded.

Opium Seizure

Drug Found Concealed In Galley On Board Liner

Vancouver, B.C.—Customs officers have seized $7,000 worth of opium found concealed in a galley on board the liner "Empress of Japan."

The officers obtained additional scattered contraband valued at $500. Members of the crew reported that some deliveries of narcotics were made off Honolulu, the stuff being tossed overboard to be picked up by fishing boats.

Canadian Wheat For East

Vancouver, B.C.—Another cargo of Canadian wheat will leave here soon for the far east. It was stated in grain circles today that four thousand tons, about 135,000 bushels, had been sold in Vladivostok for August delivery through the local firm of Herr, Clifford and Company. Shipment of the order will be made almost immediately. A few months ago several million bushels of western grain were shipped from here to the Russian port.

Prevent Soil Drifting

Winnipeg, Man.—Farmers of Saskatchewan will be required by law to keep their farms at home. If the Wood River Municipality Council has its way, the council will urge the legislature to enact laws requiring farmers to prevent soil drifting on roads.

Failing this, action is promised at the owner's expense.

Communism, like an octopus, is spreading its tentacles throughout the United States, and its growing menace must be met by drastic measures of legislation, Baroness Otilly de Ropp, Russian-born authoress and lecturer, resident in the States since 1915, told a Montreal newspaper.

A new amendment to the criminal code makes it possible for action to be taken against a person issuing a cheque for more than the amount to his credit at the bank. Why not carry the matter further and protect our merchants, who are equally deserving, from being overdrawn by their customers.

quarts of milk a day. She has no dainty appetite, consuming about 34 pounds of feed and 25 gallons of water a day. She weighs nearly 1900

banite, "was the first chicken to ever ruin a man's garden."

"People with itching ankles and lumpy brows are inclined to wonder what purpose the tiny, musical mosquito serves in our scheme of things.
These little winged spirits fit to and fro and guard us against forest fires.
Last year, few mosquitoes and many devastating forest fires. This year, the mosquitoes are more numerous and highly organized, and there are no forest fires. Better a few mosquito bites than ruined homesteads.

Homesteaders in the Allison Creek district are being awakened earlier than usual this week by the members of the Cubs' bugle band there. It was not known till Tuesday morning that the kids were being trained for the next Crows' Nest Pass Musical Festival by "Teddy" Royle. And to make matters worse, a transient
"Scottie" appeared near the scene of hostilities on Monday night and blew the "pipes." It's taken for granted by the kiddies that the piper was a real Scotchman, for he was not expensively dressed.
